Digger Creek Fish out June 5, 2021

The Digger Creek Fish out was well attended by both fishermen and visitors, Larry Willis, Don and Pat Sleeper, Bill and Katie Roberson, Lionel Vallely, Phil Ryan, Pete Wilk, Lincoln Gray, Elden

Hinkle and Two Veterans, Ernie Flud and Lee Markos from the Project Healing Waters Flyfishing project that Pet Wilk mentored for the day.

In the past this event was held in late August/September but thought it would be nice to hold it earlier in the year when the weather is cooler. Well, we did have it earlier but, as we know the weather has still been very hot; fortunately, we had a great afternoon - breezy which made for a wonderfully cool afternoon.

The fishing was Great to good depending on who you spoke to and as usual every one caught something weather it was fish or just harassment of which there was plenty of both to go around.

There were a few hard-core fishermen that really put in the time fishing, Ernie Flud, Lee Markos, Larry Willis and Lionel Valley but it seemed like a bunch of us just enjoyed setting on the porch and visiting after lunch. I have not observed or participated in so much conversation and telling of fish stories at a fish out. Think we all just enjoyed having a normal get together with longtime friends. You couldn't have found a better location than on the "Porch at Digger Creek"

Lincoln you could use that as the title of your new Blog "From the Porch of Digger Creek" you could hold a meeting there every Wednesday and we could smoke cigars drink Whiskey and solve any and all problems "From the Porch" just thinking.

The club sponsored lunch and it was supplied by the KFC and Donna Hinkle making Potato Salad, Macaroni Salad and Chocolate Chip cookies. Probably the reason most didn't leave the porch.

Elden Hinkle

Thank you, Lincoln, for supporting the club with a discount.

Walt's Worm

By: Ray Narbaitz

The vast majority of nymphs we fish today contain a bead or what's called a strike trigger or both. Super innovative fly designer Mike Mercer is always looking for that trigger in the great flies he comes up with. Materials like that are used in flies because they work...most of the time. There are times we fly fishers can go a bit overboard. I have long refrained from fishing gold beaded flies in lakes or clear water streams when the sun is high overhead. I think the bead is a little too flashy and will put fish off. I have no proof of this either way, but it's my story and I'm sticking to it.

All of this came to mind when I read a piece by a Central Pennsylvania guide/blogger named Domenic Swentosky. He titled the piece, "Feed 'em Fur." It also brought to mind a quote I like by a woman named Allison Moir. "I look into my fly box and think about all the elements I should consider in choosing the perfect fly: water temperature, what stage of development the bugs are in, what the fish are eating right now. Then I remember what a guide told me: "Ninety percent of what a trout eats is brown and fuzzy and about five-eighths of an inch long."

That fuzzy brown idea is what struck Swentosky to call for Fur on a Hook. The idea is later in the season, particularly on pressured water, flash and beads and what not spook fish off. With that, it may be time to become a little more subdued. Enter, Walt's Worm. The original Walt's is indeed just fur on a hook. The fly was first tied by Walt Young, thus the name. It has no bead, no ribbing, no tail, no legs, no wing case and no wings. It is just fur on a hook. Hook: Standard nymph or 1 extra long nymph hook, 10 to 16

Thread: 6/0 or 8/0 in Brown or Tan

Weight: Lead or Lead-Free wire, sized to hook shank

Body: Tan or Brown Hare's Mask

1. Debarb the hook and place it in the vise.
2. Wrap 6 to 8 wraps of the weighting wire right in the middle of the hook. You want the body to be cigar shaped, and this will help with that.
3. Start your thread at either end of the wire and wrap back and forth over it a few times to tie it down. End with your thread back at the bend of the hook.
4. Wind on the dubbing, tight enough to stick on the thread, but not too tight. If you have quite a few guard hairs sticking out, so much the better.
5. Wrap your dubbing up to just short of the eye of the hook. Remember, you are looking for a cigar shaped body.

6. Wrap your thread back over the body in spiral wraps, to the bend of the hook. This will help make the body more durable.
7. Now repeat steps 4 and 5. If you don't think the body is fat enough in the middle, you can add a little more dubbing there. Bring your thread to the eye of the hook, make a small head, and whip finish.
8. Use whatever kind of material brush you have and brush out the body so it is even more shaggy.
9. Put some head cement on the whip finish, and the fly is done.

Note: Of course, after Walt's Worm came the Sexy Walt's. It has ribbing, some flash, etc...While the original called for natural or tan Hare's Mask, it can also be tied in Olive and Black...If you wanted a fly that had a bit more bling, but was still pretty much Fur on a Hook, you could use something like a non-beaded Bird's Nest or Hare's Ear.
